APPEAL TO SAVINGS BANKS ON LOAN

Committee in Final Effort to Put New England "Over the Top" on Subscriptions

Savings banks must now do their part in raising the third Liberty Loan.

With New England's quota only 78 per cent. subscribed at the beginning of the final week of the campaign, the local Liberty Loan committee is taking action to bring the savings banks to a more direct sense of their responsibilities.

To every savings bank in New England the following letter has gone:

Subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan are lagging. The day-to-day returns as they are now coming in are most disappointing, and are indicative not only of a distinct slump in the campaign, but point to an actual failure in this district. The immediate situation is such that the loan can go through to success only if New England awakens to the situation. Large subscriptions from financial institutions are imperative, and unless there is an immediate response from this investment source, the returns from New England will be unsatisfactory and we may not even attain our quota.

The savings banks of New Eng-

BURGLARS GET $1,400 IN SPRINGFIELD STORE

Springfield, April 29. — Burglars cracked the safe of the Carlisle Hardware Company on Main street, between closing time Saturday and this morning. They got $1,300 in currency and a $100 Liberty bond.

Entrance was forced into a building used for storage purposes and situated across the alley. The cracksmen then cut their way through a metal covered fire door and by a tunnel beneath the alley entered the store.

BRIDGEWATER MAN HELD FOR THEFT OF A LETTER

DOUBT HEIRESS IS SUICIDE IN LOVE TRAGEDY

Mrs. James E. Simpson (Miss Claire A. Owens) who, with her husband, was found dead in a Cambridge apartment. Parental opposition had led to a secret marriage. Despite the theory of a death pact, friends of the girl bride incline to the theory of accident or design.

New light was thrown today on the remarkable love tragedy of James Elwyn Simpson, State street bookkeeper, and his secret bride, formerly Claire A. Owens of Newbury street, whose bodies were found in their gas-filled apartments at No. 344 Harvard street, Cambridge.

Several new elements have entered the case, which friends of the dead girl declare substantiate their theory that she was not in a suicide pact but that she died either by accident or design on the part of her husband.

These new elements are:

WAS TO RECEIVE LEGACY.

The bride, who was nineteen, was to have received a legacy on Aug. 1, which is now held in trust by her father, John L. Owens, now on the way home from his orange plantation at Drayton Island, Florida.

She had purchased dresses for her graduation from the Curry School of Expression which her father and stepmother left Florida to attend.

GERMANY'S SUBMARINE LOSSES ARE DOUBLED

Zurich, April 29.—It is learned from a trustworthy source that Germany's submarine losses during the past six weeks were more than double the losses during January and February.

Terrific Gas Attack Made on British

The ever-growing peril of Ypres and increasing use of American forces in Picardy were featured in today's war dispatches. Chief developments described were as follows:

1—The Germans have begun two drives on the western front, one against Ypres and the other against Amiens. They bombarded the British and French troops southwest of Ypres with gas shells and high explosive shells. They followed this with infantry attacks along a ten-mile stretch from Meteren up to Voormezeele, where the German encircling movement comes within two miles of Ypres on its south side. The Paris War Office reported today that the Huns renewed their attacks east of Amiens in the night with a number of assaults at Hangard wood, but the attacks were repulsed.

2—American troops are in front-line trenches on the Amiens front. Paris recently reported a German attack of Franco-American positions between the Somme and Avre Rivers, southeast of Amiens. Today's dispatches said that the Americans were holding part of the battlefront in Picardy. Presumably the front-line location referred to today is in the same river territory.

With the American Army in Northern France, April 29.—American artillery went into action three days ahead of the infantry when the Americans reached the scene of the big battle.

As far the infantry has been committed quiet since the tremendous uproar over part of the line as a unit attacked by the French but violent artillery duels were raged night and day.

A struggle has been proceeding with great violence twelve miles north of the American positions.

GERMANS RENEW DRIVE IN FLANDERS, BUT ARE AGAIN CHECKED

ATTACK IN LOCRE SECTOR FAILS; BOMBARDMENT ON WHOLE FRONT

3—Two over-Sunday American casualty lists issued by the War Department today contain a total of 156 names. Eighteen men were killed in action. Among the wounded are officers of the old Ninth Massachusetts Infantry.

4—British troops recaptured an advanced German post near Festubert in the La Bassee district, with 50 prisoners and three machine guns. The British also took prisoners and machine guns in a raid south of Albert on the Picardy front.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, April 29.—The Germans renewed their drive in the Locre sector of the Flanders front Sunday afternoon, but were repulsed, the War Office announced today.

Locre lies on high ground just west of Kemmel Hill in Belgium. It is between seven and eight miles southwest of Ypres. In the official report issued by the War Office last night it was stated that a German attack was developing at Locre.

The German assault at Locre broke down under the rifle and machine gun fire of the allied defenders.

This morning a violent bombardment developed all along the battle line from Meteren to Voormezeele. Infantry attacks are developing.

British forces recaptured an advanced post near Festubert, along with fifty prisoners and three machine guns. It had been lost to the Germans on April 26.

ARTILLERY ACTIVE.

North of the Scarpe river (the district east of Arras) German artillery developed much activity during the night, the cannonade extending as far as Lens.

South of Albert (on the Picardy front) and near Neuville Vitasse (farther north), the British made a successful raid, capturing prisoners and machine guns.

The text of the official report follows:

"The attack, reported to be developing yesterday afternoon in the Locre sector, was repulsed by our rifle and machine gun fire.

"A bombardment, in which gas shells and high explosives were used, began this morning on the whole front from Meteren to Voormezeele.

GAIN AT FESTUBERT.

"Infantry attacks are developing.

"The hostile artillery was active during the night between the Scarpe river and Lens, and between Givenchy and Nieppe forest.

"We recovered a post near Festubert that had been captured by the Germans on April 26, along with fifty prisoners and three machine guns.

"South of Albert and near Neuville-Vitasse we raided German positions, capturing some prisoners and four machine guns."

ATTACK EASE OF AMIENS.

German forces on the Picardy battlefront renewed their attacks east of Amiens during the night, but were repulsed, the French War Office stated today.

A number of assaults were delivered at Hangard wood.

In the sector of Villers-Bretonneux (about nine miles east of Amiens) a heavy artillery duel is raging, while the big guns are active also on other parts of the battle front. The Paris communique follows:

"During the night the Germans frequently attacked at Hangard wood, but were repulsed.

"There was intense artillery activity at Villers-Bretonneux in the sector of Locre-Kemmel and between Lassigny and Noyon.

"An enemy raid north of Grivesnes was without result.

"We penetrated the German lines near Cortenay, west of Courty, on the right bank of the Meuse (Verdun front), and in upper Alsace, capturing many prisoners. There was lively artillery firing around Bois Fosses and Cauterets wood.

"Elsewhere the night was calm."

TWO BAY STATE MEN FOR CAMP INSTRUCTORS

Camp Gordon, Ga., April 29.—Massachusetts has the distinction of furnishing two American Expeditionary Force "veterans" as instructors for national army men now in training here. They are Lieutenant Howard C. Leslie, Milton, and Second Lieutenant Doyal C. Carpenter, Springfield, who arrived here, direct from "somewhere in France" after several months' service in the trenches. They are among the first American officers to be returned to this country as instructors and were selected because of special training and distinguished service in France.

The selection of these Massachusetts men and their brother officers who returned with them as instructors indicates that the War Department is anxious to make the American soldiers among the best trained in the field and realizes the importance of having as instructors men who have had experience at the front.

YANKEE GUNNERS ON FRONT LINE OF CONFLICT

Artillery Duel Rages Night and Day, Protecting Move-up of U. S. Infantry

It is now permitted to cable these facts, but it is inadvisable to state the number of our forces, the date of their arrival or the particular sector occupied by our men.

CLASHES IN THE DARK.

Infantry operations have been limited to patrol and outpost clashes in the darkness.

The guns generally open up their cannonades about 8:30 in the evening, continuing to pound the trenches until daylight. Then there is a lull, but they resume about 9:30 in the morning and continue until late in the afternoon. Thus far there have been no gas shells.

The whole sector is decidedly different from those held by other American contingents.

Roche shells already have fallen within a few rods of our hospitals.

The Americans entered the first line after a successful movement, followed by a few exercises in the rear. The first movement frontward was preceded by a notable conference of officers around a certain old chateau which may take a place in American history, when the censor permits the publication of what occurred.

The weather was raw and misty today and the artillery fire was under normal because of bad visibility.

OPEN ARTILLERY DUEL.

As soon as the American artillery was ready, after reaching the new front, it opened up a lively fire against enemy batteries, roads and ammunition dumps, thus becoming a part of the great curving crescent of fire, lighting up the country for miles.

All night and the following morning the guns shelled the Germans clinging to shell holes and poorly constructed trenches with considerable effectiveness, and it is believed that the enemy suffered many casualties.

The enemy countered with a heavy bombardment, but artillery work on both sides making the gun work on the Americans' former front look like child's play.

The first infantry detachments went into line under the heaviest enemy shell fire. For several nights the whole region for miles around was rocking. Despite this, our casualties in taking over the sector previously held by the French on the first and succeeding nights were insignificant.

ENCIRCLED BY SHELLS.

One company was encircled by shells while entering the line, but sustained no casualties. Later detachments went in under the cover of heavy mist.

The infantry discovered a great difference here in the kind of ground used. The front line has been shifting daily. Americans and Germans clinging to shell holes, ravines and gullies, linked together by hurriedly constructed narrow trenches through which the men have had to crawl on their stomachs. There is no barbed wire on the entire sector, outposts are only 200 to 400 yards apart, making it easy to stumble into the enemy's lines in the darkness if one is careless.

The terrain is generally flat and slightly undulating in places. There are a few small patches of woodland. From a few observation posts towns behind the German lines can be plainly seen on clear days.

The situation is gradually stabilizing. Both sides are digging in deeper and are even attempting to construct communication trenches rearward in more exposed places.

POSITIONS ARE EXPOSED.

There is constant fire from artillery and machine guns on both sides, making the work difficult.

Whole companies are occupying positions at some points so exposed there is little communication possible with the rear, except at night, when the artillery of both sides blankets the land in front.

Air patrols were very active the first two days, but on the following days mist interfered.

The following general order, signed by the French general commanding at the place from which American troops moved to the battle front, has now reached the American forces:

"At this time when we see the first American troops leaving for the battle, officers, non-commissioned officers and soldiers of the French army salute their brothers in arms whose bravery they admire. They congratulate them on being about to write in the battle of nations the first page of the history of the sons of the great republic who have come to fight on the soil of France for the triumph of liberty. It is a page that will be glorious."

Series of Hun Assaults Intended to Drive Allies From All High Positions

By FRANK CHARLTON,
International News Service Cable Editor.

Concentrating their pressure against a ten-mile line between Meteren and Voorezemeele, the Germans on the Flanders battle front have begun a series of assaults in order to drive the British and French from the last of the high ground they hold in that district and thus compel the evacuation of Ypres.

The Meteren-Voorezemeele line is a crucial part of the battle zone, lying across the Franco-Belgian frontier. Meteren is in France, about two miles west of Bailleul; Voorezemeele is in Belgium, two miles south of Ypres.

The German thrusts in that sector followed another attempt by the Germans to break the Anglo-French front at Locre, about midway between Meteren and Voorezemeele. The attack broke down under the allied fire.

Cannon are roaring over the greater part of the Flanders and Picardy battle fields, indicating that infantry fighting may break out on a grand scale in front of Amiens, northeast and southeast of Arras and in the sector southeast of Ypres.

The British War Office in its official report today located the bombardments between the Scarpe River and Lens and from Givenchy to Nieppe forest. Those two sectors cover a front of nearly thirty miles.

To the east of Amiens the cannonade rose to the intensity of drum fire around Villers-Bretenieux and in the sectors of the Luce River and Noyon.

It was a high compliment to the American army that they have been put in a vital part of the Picardy front, between the Somme and Avre rivers, where they are now fighting shoulder to shoulder with the French.

This, the fortieth day of the German grand offensive, found the Germans only two miles from Ypres, but they are no closer to the British than at Amiens than they were a fortnight ago.

Today's London communique tells of a German repulse around Locre, on high ground just west of Kemmel Hill. The two arrows point to Meteren, on the south of the high sector, and Voormezeele, between which it was also announced the Teutons launched a heavy bombardment. Berlin reported yesterday the withdrawal of the British front in the Ypres salient to a line running southwest of Langemarck (four and a half miles from Ypres) to Verlorenhoek (two miles), to Hooge (two miles), to Zillebeke (two miles) at some points even farther back than the line held in the Fall of 1914. There was desperate fighting for Voormezeele (two miles south of Ypres), which the Germans stormed Saturday afternoon, only to be driven out in the night, and for Locre, which the French retook on Friday.

U. S. SOLDIERS TO DECIDE ISSUE IN WAR

Final Result Depends on Man Power, Says War Department in Weekly Review

By International News Service.

Washington, April 29.—Declaring that the outcome of the present operations on the west front depends on man-power and that the enemy is seeking a decision that will end the war, the weekly review of the War Department states that it is our imperative duty to provide replacement units for the armies in France.

Very large quotas in addition to those already called to the colors or already selected for service will be required in the immediate future to fill the gaps.

While admitting that the series of brises up to the present have in a large measure favored the enemy, the review maintains that unity of command of the allied forces has doomed to failure the intentions of the enemy to paralyze the independent will power of the British command and has extended the operation to the broader field of general engagements in which the allied forces will be used interchangeably.

Thus instead of the enemy being able to defeat the British army and then turn its full energy against the French, the allies are now able to oppose their strength to the hostile attack.

Our own forces have taken part in the battle and are in action in the area east of Amiens. The review states modestly that during the various engagements which have ranged in this area, they have "acquitted themselves well."

The battle of Salcheprey on the morning of April 21 is described briefly. Following a heavy preliminary barrage, the enemy swept over our lines on a frontage of approximately three kilometres, a little more than two miles. Our men were driven out of the village, but in the night the Germans evacuated the positions captured and we were able to reoccupy our original front lines.

FIRST BOSTON SUNDAY BALL GAME ADDS $1,520 TO CAMP DEVENS FUND

30,000 SEE ARMY-NAVY CONTEST

More than 30,000 people crowded into Braves Field to witness the first legalized Sunday baseball game ever played in Massachusetts. The game was played by the Camp Devens team and a nine from Commonwealth Pier, and was for the benefit of the Boston AMERICAN'S Camp Devens Baseball Fund.

The collection taken in the crowd for this fund totaled $1,520.24.

This collection puts the baseball fund very nearly over the top.

Major-General Harry L. Hodges, commanding officer of the 76th Division at Camp Devens, occupied a box behind the home plate and promptly at 3 p. m. threw the ball out into the field.

In the adjoining box was Captain William R. Rush, commandant of the Charlestown Navy Yard, with his staff. Other boxes along the first tier were filled with army and navy officers and their wives. A delegation from the Governor's Council attended and the city was represented by a delegation sent by Mayor Peters.

As early as 1 o'clock people began to crowd about the gates and when the field was opened at 1:30 p. m. a rush for the seats indicated the crowd which was to follow.

Immediately before the game a pretty ceremony in aid of the Liberty Loan was gone through by the members of both teams.

The players left the two dugouts bearing red, white and blue Liberty Loan bullseyes and marched out into the middle of the field. Here they lined up and turned round one by one showing on the backs of the bullseye letters which altogether made the following slogan: "Make a Hit Yourself and Buy a Liberty Bond."

Immediately afterwards former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald walked out into the field in front of the grand stand and made a very stirring appeal to the crowd to perform the double patriotic duty of subscribing to Liberty Bonds, and contributing to the Boston AMERICAN Camp Devens Baseball Fund.

Fifty-two women who had volunteered for the occasion passed down through the stands and took the collection.

These were members of the classes at the Faelten Piano School, headed by Mrs. Marie D. Faelten; 12 girls from Notre Dame Academy, under the leadership of Miss Gertrude Tighe of Roxbury; members of the Professional Women's Club of Boston and members of the Woman's Law Association.

EVERYBODY CONTRIBUTED.

Everybody contributed. Hundreds of children, young boys and little girls, dug out a treasured nickel or dime and threw it into the pans.

One little boy contributed a penny—his all.

Another youngster put a dime into the pan which was passed around by Sybil Holmes, a woman lawyer, and said, "I'll have to have a nickes change so I can get a ride home."

The collection was a striking indication of the temper of the people when it comes to helping the soldiers. Men in the uniform of the service were especially liberal and many a soldier threw a bill into the collectors' tins, which he could perhaps ill afford out of his $30 a month.

The men at Camp Devens, when they have their new grandstand and athletic field can feel that it was built out of the generosity of everyone, high and low, who attended that and other games which have been played for his benefit.

They will also have to thank the members of the Braves club who, through their business manager, Walter E. Hapgood, gave the field free and as much the occasion possible.

They will also have to thank the members of the band from the Harvard Radio School which played all the afternoon gratis under the able direction of F. C. Evans, bandmaster. This band was contributed to the occasion by Robert Weeks of the Liberty Loan Committee.

Through the courtesy of the Jordan Marsh Company two large bags of money collected at the game were taken to the store where the money was counted on a counting machine.

Never in the history of Boston has there been a more quiet and orderly crowd than that which attended this game. The usual enrush of youngsters came with the first opening of the gates, but they were followed during the next hour by their elders and a more dignified crowd never assembled at any gathering.

Once and for all time, Sunday baseball was robbed of any implication of rowdyism. Soldiers, men and their sweethearts, elderly men, clean young fellows, army and navy officers, and men together with a goodly assortment of regular baseball fans made up the crowd.

CHEERING SUBDUED.

The applause was confined to mild cheering and hand clapping, and no one a few blocks away from the field would have had the slightest idea that anything was in progress there.

Business Manager Walter E. Hapgood of the Braves in an interview with the AMERICAN said:

"I am greatly pleased with the result of the game. It shows that Boston can and does approve of Sunday games, and it also proves, if proof were needed, the pulling power of the Boston AMERICAN. It was a great occasion."

As a result of the collection at the game the maximum for the Boston AMERICAN'S Camp Devens Baseball Fund is almost reached.

Out of the total collection will be taken the incidental expenses of the occasion. These include the cost of policing, transportation for the teams and a few minor expenses.

This fund is being gathered to build at Camp Devens a field and grandstand and equip these so that the soldiers may have a fit place to play baseball and other games. The people of New England are being urged to subscribe to this fund by the Boston AMERICAN, and very little more money will complete the required total.

A word as to the right way to make your contributions to this fund:

DO NOT MAKE ANY CHECKS FOR THE FUND PAYABLE TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN. MAKE ALL CHECKS PAYABLE TO ROBERT C. DEMING, TREASURER, WHO IS IN CHARGE OF THE FUND. THE AMERICAN IS ACTING SIMPLY AS A TRANSFER AGENT.

The latest list of subscriptions is as follows:

RUSSELLITES IN N. Y. SCORED FOR TREASON

By International News Service.

New York, April 29.—By a vote of 592 to eight the congregation of former Pastor Russell's tabernacle, No. 2 Hicks street, Brooklyn, has this yesterday afternoon to listen to Liberty Loan speakers.

An impromptu meeting of the loan speakers was held outside the building. The departing worshipers listened to some very plain language. Then bottles and cans were thrown at them, and a mob chased them up the hill to Columbia Heights.

The well-dressed crowd was hooted and jeered by the people of the neighborhood who had gathered. Cries of "traitors" and yells of derision followed their flight. Captain Dunn and the police reserves of the Poplar street station made the exodus of the Russellites safe, if not dignified.

DENOUNCED AS TRAITORS.

When the result of the vote was made known, Captain McDonough of the Home Guards borrowed chairs from neighboring stores and organized a meeting outside. A crowd gathered. As the congregation filed out of the Tabernacle Captain McDonough shouted:

"You people around here have been harboring in your midst a band of traitors and seditionists. They are not Americanized. They are traitors. By their vote of 592 to 8 today they have practically advocated the killing of your sons and brothers on the battle field. Only last week a boy from this neighborhood was killed by a German bullet in France."

FOUND WIRELESS SET.

The International Bible Society, which is the incorporated name of the Russellites, has been under the ban of the authorities for several months. Many of their pacifistic speakers have been refused permission to talk in western and Canadian cities. The Department of Justice raided the Bethel a few weeks ago. A wireless apparatus was dismantled and many papers confiscated.

BOSTON WOMEN READY TO HELP SAVE BABIES

Boston's part in the Baby Welfare campaign to save 100,000 infants for the United States this year was published today by Mrs. Robert L. Ingraham, who has charge of the campaign in Boston, and Miss Winifred Bland, supervisor of nurses for the Baby Hygiene Association.

Women pledged to help in greater Boston's "weighing and measuring drive," May 1 to May 20, met at No. 421 Boylston street, the headquarters of District No. 8, and heard the principles and instructions.

"The other countries are looking to the rising American generation to replace the work of reconstruction after the war," said Mrs. De Normandie. "The alarming decrease in the birth rates in New York, for instance, and the large number of suitable men who have had to be rejected for war service, make this apparent more than ever. It is a duty of our generation."

Miss Bland explained in detail to the women the methods of weighing and measuring and the filling out of the cards which are to be used in the campaign.

"You people around here have been harboring in your midst a band of traitors and seditionists. They are not Americanized. They are traitors. DENY HEIRESS ENTERED INTO DEATH PACT

She had obtained a position as a reader to a Watertown woman and was to go there tomorrow. Miss Mond was also to take a prominent part in a recital during the coming week.

Young Fenderson was employed by Jones, Brooks & Co. for 22 years, but is now working for Hall, Whitcomb & Co. No. 72 State street, where he was employed.

He was in charge of the draft, but said he did not think death because no one cared for him.

He received a small salary and is believed that he feared the consequences of breaking his marriage known to Mr. Dennis, who had disliked him from the first meeting.

Simmons, who was a grandson of a South American woman, and was said to have considerable property, was also known for shooting. His father, who arranged him from Nova Scotia, is said to be wealthy, but has not spoken to several managers of department stores.

QUARRELLED, FRIENDS THINK.

The friends of young Mrs. Simmons said that she was only partly confined to the house. Her husband, on the other hand, was fully dressed and was lying on the floor with a flashlight in his hand.

Mrs. Simmons, while nursing her late saturday night the scene of three weeks because angry at the landlord's order that all lights be turned out at 10 o'clock. Nothing from the angry people in front, and ran down to the kitchen which the young people lived with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jones, who live below. Her friends believe the three herself upon a couch and smoked for a time.

Her friends also believe that some time after midnight she left the house and went down after her. Finding her asleep, it is thought he decided that without waking his bride, he turned out the lights, went back upstairs to a cot there and then laid down on the floor beside the couch to rest.

The first authentic story of the marriage of the bride and groom was in the AMERICAN today in Justice of the Peace James W. Poole of No. 84 Dorchester street, that they were married April 8 in his office.

"I remember their coming here on April 8," said Mr. Poole, "as there is nothing unusual in their manner, but the occasion is fixed in my mind by the fact that I had to go out to get into the street and escorted two sailors to act as witnesses."

SAILORS WITNESSED WEDDING.

"This was done when I told him that witnesses were necessary. The sailors gave their names as Raymond A. Wickham of Schenectady and Frank Wilson of Brooklyn.

The license was in the proper form and I had little conversation with the bride and groom, as it was the routine questions. They appeared affectionate, but I do not recall that they kissed.

Simpson said that he was 23 years old, a native of Boston and a single man. His parents' names he gave as Frank and Mary Simpson. His mother was a Central American, whose maiden name was Mary Hicks. Her address was No. 276 Church street, Newton. The young woman gave her address as No. 241 Quincy street and her occupation as a student. She was born in Brockton twenty years ago, she said, and her name is Lorena and Alice G. Parker.

"I always have persons whom I marry sign a statement to my book, and there was no exception in this record. Their actions while they were here were in no way different from the handling of other couples that are. I did not know there was any opposition to the wedding of the two and did not suspect it, as they had any intention of keeping it a secret. They were very much in love and did a position to wed if they chose."

James H. Fraser, who supervised Simpson's work in the office of Hunt, Smith & Co., said:

"Mr. Simpson worked here about a year and had a fine personality. He was a very pleasing young man and did not have much to say. He appeared dependent upon his work for support and I do not know that he did not fear the draft because there was no one dependent upon him. I knew at the time we did not know he was married. We learned it last week and were surprised. There was no exception for him. Members of the office staff remembered him with ribbons and flowers, and we also had procured a beautiful wedding gift.

"We were aware of our feelings when we read of the tragedy. The decorations were still here and the ribbons and flowers for a wedding we will have to secure flowers for a funeral."

Mrs. Simpson's mother, Mrs. Fraser said that Simpson had a minor civil service position in the Navy Yard, and that Simpson asked for an early vacation, other than that he knew nothing of his plans.

Mrs. S. S. Curry, wife of the physician of the Boylston School of Expression, said that the couple attended a recital last Thursday night, when the bride appeared in a pink dress and white hat. They both seemed very happy that evening, she said.

Mrs. Curry said that Simpson's mother left her a large sum of money, which she would have received on the death of her father. It was said to have sold the Peace Haven Hotel, at Nos. 8 and 10 Peace street, in the North End, to the Newberry street home where his daughter made her home.

DISLIKED BY GIRL'S FATHER.

Mrs. Curry said that Simpson and Miss Lorena brought young Simpson during a vacation at Cushing Academy, at which both were students. Mr. Curry is said to have disliked the young man and to discourage his friendship with the girl. He was unsuccessful in this case, however, two servants and a nurse were forced to flee a school clad in the home of August Haffenreffer after the latter's home had been wrecked by fire.

During the course of the fire many articles which have been in the family for generations, family pictures, bric-a-brac and furniture were totally destroyed.

Turkish Troops Kill Some American Missionaries

By International News Service.

London, April 29.—Turkish troops have massacred a number of American missionaries, according to a dispatch from Athens today. Mr. Meyer received a cable message from Constantinople, but the dispatch did not indicate the number of victims. It also stipulated that one woman and one child were among the victims. Mr. Meyer is a resident minister in charge of the Methodist Episcopal mission in Constantinople.

GIVES NEWS OF WEDDING.

Mrs. Mond said today that Simpson called at the house and that she was always present at the meetings. The young man was presently at work in the office of Hunt, Smith & Co., and had been with the firm for a year. He came to the Navarre from Cushing Academy, Ashburnham, where he graduated last June. Mrs. Mond said that Simpson was going to visit friends in Chicago and intended to bring his bride back to Boston. On the following day the girl called Miss Mond by telephone and informed her that she was married and was hoping happiness, although she was afraid that her father would not forgive her. She said that her husband would be drafted that month in all probability, and that she was planning for a outing to wait until her father's return before notifying him of her marriage. Mrs. Mond said that Simpson, when she was born and at times visited them in the city. Mrs. Mond received a letter from her in which she told of her marriage and was extremely cheerful in tone, Mrs. Long said.

NO HINT OF SUICIDE.

H. S. Hatch, principal of Cushing Academy at Ashburnham, who was the boy's guardian received a letter from him last Thursday in which he told of his marriage. The letter, the principal said, was written in the home of his wife, was also extremely cheerful in tone and apparently no thought of suicide was entertained or implied.

The young couple appeared at the lodging house of Mr. and Mrs. Irving De Orling, No. 241 Harvard street, Brookline, Thursday night and requested a small room, and as the house looked quite young Mrs. Orling asked if they were married. Mr. Simpson said that they were, but that the marriage was a secret, as his parents did not approve of it.

They appeared to be gentlemen and they were given an apartment consisting of a bedroom on the second floor and a kitchen in the basement. Mrs. Orling said that their meals were sent in to the house by restaurant lodgers, and the police are curious as to how they obtained their food.

The bride's trunk arrived a short time later, but Simpson's did not arrive until Saturday night. He only carried a small bag which he had on his back. Mrs. Orling said that the bride and groom seemed very happy, although Simpson in straitened circumstances, as he had no money with him at the time they were there.

Mrs. Orling said the woman's toilet articles were arranged on a bureau, but there were no pictures or other personal effects in the room. She could get all the time to have in her room.

MAKE TRAGIC DISCOVERY.

It is believed that they went to their room early Saturday night, but nothing was heard from them. About 8 o'clock Sunday morning Mrs. Orling smelled a strong odor of gas coming from the room of the couple. She rapped at the door, but received no answer. She then went to the basement kitchen and turned off the gas. She then went to the door and the gas was streaming from the entrance, including a very strong odor. Mrs. Orling became frightened, she declared, and her husband's body was taken to the undertaking rooms. He had been dead for some time.

In the meantime Mrs. Owen with his wife and daughter, friends of Simpson's were in the office of Hunt, Smith & Co.

Mr. Simpson worked here about a year and had a fine personality. He was a very pleasing young man and did not have much to say. He appeared dependent upon his work for support and I do not know that he did not fear the draft because there was no one dependent upon him. I knew at the time we did not know he was married. BOSTON MEN AT U.S. PORT AFTER PARIS TRIP

At Atlantic Port, April 29—Among the passengers arriving on a liner today was a committee of Boston men who went abroad on the first unescorted mercy ship to find out what was needed most by the soldiers and sailors of the United States in France.

Before leaving for France the committee, composed of Edward Dana, orange manufacturer, and Frederick Winthrop, Jr., of the Boston Stock Exchange, had conferred with President Wilson and Secretary of War Baker and received formal commendation from them.

They said they had come to Paris during a bombardment by the great German guns from Paris and had been awakened by the shock of the big guns.

When the German big guns' secret, Mr. Baxter said, there was considerable of a panic in Paris, the fear being that the time the Germans had perfected their guns to shell the capital, the Hun fleet would be destroyed. The fear was justified, he said, for about a week when it became evident that the French guns were not reaching the city, confidence and cheer after which the city had shown when it was bombarded.

The parade was augmented for a short time, business men, Grand Army veterans and school children marched and crowds gathered at the depot to see the future soldiers of Uncle Sam leave the city of their birth for their journey to France.

Despite the rain the parade was the appearance in line of the brothers and sisters of the draftees. Small flags and bunches of flowers in the hands of the boys and girls who marched were given to each draftee and the Red Cross and Salvation Army workers.

Factories and shops closed for several hours to allow the people to see the parade to allow the operatives to see it. Three bank presidents acted as honorary aides to Mayor Hurley, chairman of the Lynn Liberty Loan committee, and Lieutenant Governor Calvin Coolidge.

No Medicine-Chest Without Its Family Laxative

From the baby to the grandparents a good laxative is the necessary medicine in little ills. It wards off serious sickness and saves doctor's bills. Many a cold has been prevented from running into grippe and pneumonia by its timely use.

Many a racking headache has been quickly dispelled by it. And it is a laxative rather than a drastic cathartic or purgative that should be in every family medicine-chest, for a laxative can be used at all ages.

Thousands of good American families have for more than a quarter century used a combination of simple laxatives with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a laxative-tonic that acts on the bowels and stomach. It has with it perfect safety, and it is equally effective for grownups.

Grandparents are now seeing their children give it to their babies. It is excellent for all the family in constipation no matter how caused; indigestion, wind colic, biliousness, headaches, dyspepsia and similar ills.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

NO INCREASE

In spite of enormously increased laboratory costs due to the War the manufacturers of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are sacrificing their profits and absorbing the war taxes, so that this family laxative may remain at the popular price of 50c and $1 a large bottle. So sold by druggists for 26 years

122 MASSACHUSETTS HEROES HONORED BY FRANCE FOR BRAVERY

BOYS OF THE 104TH REGIMENT GIVEN THE CROSS OF WAR

This honor, the first award to an American regiment ever made by a foreign government, went to the troops which withstood the first German attack in force, the raid of the 800 picked shock troops in the Apremont wood sector, northwest of Toul, on April 10, 12 and 13.

The regiment, formerly was the old Second and Eighth regiments of the National Guard. It had seen service in Mexican border.

Two chaplains of the regiment were among those decorated. Rev. John S. Des Valles, Catholic, and Rev. Walter S. Danker, Episcopalian, both for distinguished service in administering to the wounded and dying while under fire.

Six Salvation Army girls and a sprinkling of French peasant girls were among the spectators. The row of honor men stretched across the field, tall, slender and handsome American youth, with Chasalin Des Vallos at their head. As the French and American generals, accompanied by their staffs, crossed the field, a band played snatches of "The Star Spangled Banner and "The Marseillaise."

AMID BOOMING OF CANNON.

Heavy artillery boomed on the battle line across the ridge as the French general, in conferring the Croix de Guerre, said:

"This regiment showed during the battles of April 10, 12 and 13 the greatest heroism and a fine spirit of sacrifice. Subjected to very violent bombardments and attacked by very important German forces, your regiment succeeded in checking a dangerous advance and then with vigor and energy retook at the point of the bayonet the few positions from which you had retired under the first assault."

The general then passed down along the line of Massachusetts patriots, pinning on the breast of each man the French war medal and shaking the hand of each man decorated. He was followed by the American, who grasped the hand of each and had words of cheer for all. To one man he said:

"Smile, lad, it is a proud day for you and for us all, and even of historical importance. Remember, it is the first time an American regiment was ever decorated by any European army."

SOMERVILLE PRIVATE FAINTED.

The men smiled as their general greeted them, but the strain was too much for Private James Corbett of Somerville, Mass. He fell backward in a dead faint just before the French general reached to pin the medal on his breast. Overcome by the strain of battle, and gave way through excitement and fatigue, but soon recovered.

In the line were gaps showing the places where dead and wounded whose valor was being remembered belonged. Medals for the former are being forwarded to their relatives, while those for the wounded were distributed in the hospitals.

The battle for which the decorations were awarded was the first important one in the war for the Americans and was followed by about a week later by the battle of Seicheprey.

Chaplain Des Valles, who is from New Bedford, and Chaplain Danker, from Worcester, a major, several captains and non-commissioned officers head the long line of privates in the dramatic ceremony.

The 104th, wearing "steel Stetsons" in full equipment, marched seven kilometres ankle deep in mud, a picture of physical power.

Those who saw them on review before they crossed the Atlantic, as I did, would be delighted at the military progress they have made. The trenches have left their tough upon all.

They stood on a picturesque plateau surrounded by hills, a lofty range cutting off the field, and six kilometers distant a sky of leaden smoke and fog gave the mountain a blue tint as a background for the regiment drawn up in hollow square formation.

With color bearers in the centre, a band to the left and the field lined with American and French soldiers, the scene resembled a football field.

RICH BEAUTY BETRAYED LUXBERG

By International News Service.

New York, April 29.—Count Luxburg, the German envoy at Buenos Aires at the time of "Spurlos Versenkt" notoriety, who was up to international publicity by a young woman, has been found by the police in which he is said to have been living with the young woman as his wife.

It has been learned before how associated Luxburg obtained the cipher code which resulted in Luxburg's recall from Argentina. In his memoirs the German envoy called Argentina nothing more," outlined a plan to establish a German republic in the heart of the South American republics, and recommended that Argentina's ships be sunk on the high seas "Without warning."

Alvin Kreppel, the consul sergeant, who aided consul secretly last Summer in Buenos Aires, and who has been of material aid in the Department of Justice's investigation of Luxburg activities, is now in the service of the United States army, having enlisted in the Marine Corps. FANEUIL HALL TO RING WITH ORATORY AT LIBERTY LOAN RALLY

Several hundred invitations to attend the Boston AMERICAN'S meeting Tuesday noon in Faneuil Hall have been sent out by mail by Schoolhouse Commissioner Joseph P. Lomasney, chairman of the Ward 8 Liberty Loan Committee, in whose district the rally will be held. Mr. Lomasney says he is doing his utmost to make the meeting a success.

In addition to the five leading public men who have already accepted invitations to speak it is likely that two more of national reputation will be present to address the audience. Arrangements are now being made to secure these speakers and if they can arrange their schedules they will be on hand.

Those who are sure to speak are Mayor Andrew J. Peters of Boston, Robert S. Weeks of New England Liberty Loan Committee, Captain W. T. Cheverus U. S. N., Major Phillip Bears, U. S. A., and Captain Thomas F. MacMahon of the Irish Guards (British Army). Attorney Grenville B. MacFarland of the Boston AMERICAN will be the presiding officer.

All the speakers realize the necessity for inspiring the people of Boston to greater efforts to put across the third Liberty Loan. Historic Faneuil Hall will ring with their oratory.

Prior to the speaking, which will begin at 12:30 o'clock, there will be a concert by the Commonwealth Pier Band, than which there is no finer in the service in New England. Every man expects to do his "bit" to make the rally a big success.

Another feature of the program will be the singing of Mme. Wilhelmina Wright Calvert, noted concert soloist. Her new Liberty Bond song will be among the numbers she will sing. Everywhere Mme. Calvert has sung in the interest of winning the war she has created a great deal of enthusiasm. She has a pleasing personality and a fine voice.

The AMERICAN again desires to inform its readers that if they want theire seats at the meeting it will be advisable for them to reach the hall early. The doors will be open long before the meeting begins. Those who arrive first will be served first. No seats except for the speakers will be reserved. It will be a meeting long remembered so that all who are anxious to attend should make a special effort to be on hand in good season.

land have not as yet subscribed in any substantial amount, and it is the opinion of the Liberty Loan Committee of New England and of the undersigned the savings banks should subscribe a minimum of 2 per cent. of their deposits to this Third Liberty Loan. If you have not already made your subscription, will you not do so at once and make it as large as possible? Also, increase the amount already subscribed, if you can do so. There are no indications yet of of larger withdrawals by depositors than in previous loans, although some have feared there might be, owing to the higher rate of interest on the present loan. If the initial payment of 5 per cent. is large enough to make the interest on that amount material, you can notify the national bank through which you make subscription, of the amount you wish to subscribe, and they will undoubtedly defer payment until May 4 at your request.

The traditions and reputation of New England are at stake. The critical hour of the war has arrived. Our allies who have been fighting our battle look to us for help and we must not fail them. We call upon you, the savings banks of New England, for support in this hour of trial, and we know you will respond. Subscribe at once and subscribe generously.

The Germans oversubscribed their last loan. Can't we do as well?

NEARLY $200,000,000 NOW

Prominent savings bank officials in each State have signed the circulars that have been sent to banks in their own States. The signers in Massachusetts are Henry Parkman, treasurer of the Provident Institution for Savings of this city; F. B. Washburn, president of the Worcester Five Cent Savings Bank, and F. A. Shove, treasurer of the Malden Savings Bank.

Total subscriptions in New England to date are $196,577,000, and in the country at large $2,225,934,450. The New England figure represents 78.7 per cent. of the minimum quota for the district, but the time for the drive is growing short. Figures as announced from the federal reserve banks show actual subscriptions only, not pledged.

The total subscribed in the last twenty-four hours is for New England $12,633,000, of which Massachusetts contributed $7,454,000, New Hampshire $1,623,000, Rhode Island $1,147,000, Connecticut $1,146,000, Maine $682,000 and Vermont $581,000. Vermont's total of completed subscriptions are less than the State quota but pledges bring it well up to $7,000,000, it is understood. Maine has $11,622,000 in completed subscriptions, only $1,139,000 less than its quota. New Hampshire, with $8,245,000 subscribed, is only $957,000 short, and both States may go over the mark in the next twenty-four hours.

619,721 SUBSCRIBERS.

Connecticut is about $4,000,000 under its quota and Rhode Island is about $6,000,000 short.

There have been in New England to date 619,721 individual subscribers.

Massachusetts cities and towns are showing better form in competition for honor flags, and New England as a whole has made a fine record. Today forty-five cities and towns have qualified for flags, making 320 in all.

Newton is the 320th municipality over the top. Its quota of $2,500,000 has been surpassed by $211,800, and the workers there say that they fully expect to wind up the campaign with a total of $4,000,000.

New Bedford is among the large cities to finish with an honor flag. Its quota is $3,742,000, and it has subscribed $5,800,000. Franklin has $350,000 to its credit, a mark well over its minimum quota. Plymouth, Middleboro, Edgartown, East Douglas, Cochituate, Millis, North Brookfield, Danvers and Westboro in this State have also qualified.

OTHER FLAG TOWNS.

Maine's latest honor flag list shows South Portland, Webster, Lakeview, Fairfield, Readfield, Detroit, Lee, Fownal, Cape Elizabeth, Hollings, Westport and Frenchville. In Connecticut towns over the top include Cromwell, Willimantic, Old Saybrook, Ivoryton and Eastford.

New Hampshire honor flags winners are Dover, Colebrook, Atkinson, Bath and Danville. Vermont shows Concord, Enfield, Poultney, Pittsford, Essex, Underhill and Harvey with full quotas, and Rhode Island's list includes Exeter, West Greenwich and Coventry.

MRS. FAIRBANKS DENIES MARY IS PEACEMAKER

New York, April 29.—"It is untrue," said Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, wife of the movie star, when her attention was called to a report from Los Angeles that Mary Pickford had effected a reconciliation of Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks. "Even if there had been a reconciliation," said Mrs. Fairbanks, "it would have been utterly impossible for Miss Pickford to have brought it about. Her affairs and mine lie in different spheres. They could in no way come in contact."

1,750,000 POUNDS OF FISH LANDED AT PIER

A fleet of twenty-five vessels, bringing 1,750,000 pounds of fish arrived at the South Boston Fish Pier today. So great was the quantity that the market was unable to take care of it, some of the fish being sent to Gloucester to be turned over to curing houses. However, prices remained firm, dealers saying the demand from curing houses keeps up the prices.

SON DEAD, SAID CABLE; PROPAGANDA BLAMED

Bloomfield, N. J., April 29.—A letter was received several days ago by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Jones of Baldwin street announcing the death of their son, Thomas Henry Jones, in France. It is believed to be propaganda. The fact that it was sent from France instead of Washington caused them to telegraph the War Department. They received the following reply:

Washington, April 28.—It is with much pleasure this office has to inform you that Thomas H. Jones of the Marine Corps is not among the listed casualties to date.

The Time for Argument Has Passed
The Time for Action Has Arrived

THE present business of the United States is war. We are in it to the last dollar, to the last drop of blood, and we are prepared to fight it out on these lines. But whenever we can spend dollars instead of spending lives then we shall spend dollars—billions of them. We shall furnish the Government with these dollars—if not through voluntary subscription to bonds, then through higher taxes.

If a man hesitates over an act which will save the life of your son you do not argue with him. It is not our heritage from the ages that we should argue and equivocate when human lives are hanging in the balance. When the choice is clear and sharp between lending money to the Government and permitting one unnecessary life to be lost by our soldiers—when it is bonds or blood—when it is a simple financial arrangement at home or human agony on the fields of France—will any American hesitate?

We must not talk in terms of investment when we should be talking in terms of human life. The only possible question left to-day is how most effectively to act?

The answer is clear. It is to borrow and buy. This is not finance. It is patriotism. Let us not mince words. Let us not temporize. Let us mobilize the magnificent machinery of the banks of America into the war-service of our Government in the most tremendous crisis in its history.

Every man in the United States with a bank account must go to his bank, borrow all he can, and buy Government Bonds. Every bank must be ready and willing to lend.

Delay costs blood—the blood of our own sons

SENATORS HERE FOR SERIES

Shotton and Lavan New Members of Griffith's Family—Ruth vs. Ayers Today

By NICK FLATLEY.

The Red Sox—champions, Boston fans are already calling them—are back home for one of those short Spring series. They take on the Washington Senators for four games before going over to Gotham again for a few more shots at the Yankees.

The Barrow brigade continues to whirl merrily on, and got back to the home pasture with a mark of ten games won and two lost, which, you might say, is surely championship going.

All opposition thus far has looked alike, and the team has beyond any doubt stamped itself as dangerous in all departments, while the regulars hold out.

If any one of the present lineup comes to grief, the story will be something else. But that has nothing to do with things at present, nor let us hope will it gloom up the near future.

SCHANG NOW A REGULAR.

With the exception that Schang has carved his way into a place in the garden and ousted Whiteman, the array that opened the season was to show in today's matinee with the Senators.

The versatile Wallie got to smacking the ball so hard that Manager Ed just couldn't keep him out of there.

Babe Ruth, who is somewhat disgruntled because half of the Red Sox defeats are attached to his record, was ready today to get back on the victory route, while Clark Griffith had Doc Ayers all warmed up for the occasion. The Doc, it might be mentioned, showed a whole lot of stuff last season, and has opened up this campaign in impressive fashion.

According to John Henry of the Braves, who caught him for a couple of seasons, Ayers is going to be a really great hurler, which fact didn't cause Big Babe or the Red Sox any loss of sleep last evening.

These Senators had a few new faces to display to Boston, as the team now boasts Doc Lavan and Bert Shotton, formerly stars with the Browns. Griff confidently expects the addition of this pair to make himself and Walter Johnson finally step into the championship class.

While the athletes from the Capital haven't set the world afire thus far, they have shown a dangerous bit of kick and half of their losses have been those tough games, that are likely to go any way.

The Sox whaled the self-styled Bridgeport All-Stars, over at Bridgeport, yesterday. Barrow used a patched up team and it had a snap winning, 7 to 0. Sam Jones did the kalsomining, while Wallie Schang busted out a homer that was a near ground record.

Tendler outpointed Jackson in a six-round bout in Philadelphia January 7, but whether or not he can repeat over the Derby distance remains to be seen.

This is the sixth and final series of articles Mr. Corbett is writing on the pugilistic life of Terry McGovern.

For more than a year Terry McGovern nursed the idea that his defeat on November 28, 1901, at the hands of Young Corbett (William H. Rothwell) was a fluke. And in this a vast number of sport fans agreed with him. They believed that the dethroning of the featherweight king was an accident and that the same accident couldn't happen twice.

So a great clamor began for another meeting between the two. McGovern was wildly eager for the chance to regain his title; Young Corbett, confident that he could duplicate the trick, was willing to give Terry another match. So when a bulky offer was made by a San Francisco promoter articles were signed and the fight was staged March 31, 1903.

A huge crowd turned out to see the battling and it was rewarded by the sight of a fast, thrilling encounter. But the contest lacked the sensational slugging element of the first meeting, largely because McGovern, following the advice of his handlers, abandoned, through all the early rounds, the whirlwind aggressiveness that had made him world famous.

TOLD TO BE CAUTIOUS.

"I was told to fight cautiously—and to keep in close to Young Corbett," declared McGovern afterwards. "I followed that counsel almost entirely during the first ten rounds. If I had only stuck to that plan of battle I am sure I would have whipped Young Corbett. But I didn't."

Terry's own story, dictated immediately after the fight, gives perhaps the best and most accurate description of the contest that is possible:

After Young Corbett clipped me on the chin in the first round, I determined to be more cautious than ever before, related Terry. Just the same, it was a mighty job for me to fight back my eagerness to slug with him.

Through the first five or six rounds of that contest both of us went along at a clip that was fast.

I was keeping close to Young Corbett all the time and aimed my attacks at his stomach, as I had been told to do.

Young Corbett, on the other hand, was making vicious swings for my jaw in the hope that he could put over another "haymaker."

SLIPPED IN FAST HOOK

"I kept on top of Young Corbett all through the early part of the eleventh and after I had landed two soakers in the stomach and he seemed to be wobbling, I pulled back ready to shoot a right-hander for the jaw.

But Young Corbett saw the opening I had left and slipped a short left hook to my chin. It landed with the force of a crowbar and dazed me.

"My knees got shaky and before I could recover my balance Young Corbett was bombarding me with lefts and rights. One blow after another landed on my face and jaw and, suddenly, a right-hander hit me on the chin. My feet seemed to slip from under me—and down I went.

"I was not unconscious when I hit the floor and my brain was only slightly fogged. My trainers had told me that whenever I went down to take the count of nine each time, so as to get as much rest as possible.

"I had made the fatal error of waiting too long—or maybe it took me more than one second in climbing to my feet.

"At any rate, when I got up to an upright position I saw Referee Eddie Graney walk over to Young Corbett and heard him declare him the winner.

"Beaten twice by the same fighter—and knocked out by him on both occasions. That had been my fate."

BUNTS AND BINGLES

By H. W. LANIGAN

ED BARROW'S Red Sox are doing pretty nicely, thank you. Their record is 10-2 and they are hook-hooking along in first place, with little to worry about.

CLEAR THROUGH the first-stringers are absolutely O. K. But it remains to be seen exactly what the reserve strength amounts to. Critically speaking, it's uncertain, extremely uncertain, save behind the bat.

SCHANG HAS supplanted Whiteman in left, and, with Paul Smith in the army, Fred is the team's only extra suburbanite. His work in the early games wasn't much, which is the reason Schang got his place. At that, Whiteman makes a mighty serviceable extra hand to have hanging around.

CLARK GRIFFITH, veteran Washington manager, deserves a hearty reception when he goes out on the coaching line this afternoon. In baseball all his life, one of the best, ditto craftiest, pitchers in the game in his early life, and the hardest working manager of them all since entering the sport's executive end, the Old Fox thought of a noble plan last Summer when he originated his Bat and Ball Fund.

HE COMBED fandom the country over for nickels, dimes and quarters with which to buy baseball supplies for the boys over there and he has put over his scheme terrifically big. Griff is the biggest man in baseball with the boys in the service. So, everybody up for the gallant Washingtonian!

JACK BENTLEY, one of the fourteen Red Sox players in the service, distinguished himself in Sunday's matinee at Baltimore, when Jawn McGraw's athletes called on Jack Dunn's Orioles, by smiting out two of the six hits garnered by his side. Bentley pitched for Clark Griffith when he entered the big show. He later took to first-basing and last year did a nifty job at the station for Baltimore.

THE REDS turned in the first triple play of the season. 'Twas from Groh to Lee Magee to Sherry Magee to Allen.

ALL THE early dope favors the Sox over the Braves. The Fenway Parkers are clouting .239 to the Wigwamers .231, and the fielding notches are .973 and .953, respectively. Then, pipe the total steals: Sox 16, Braves 5.

JOHNNY ROSNER BOXES OWENS AT CHELSEA

CARD AT DOUGLAS A. C.

Main bout—Paddy Owens of Cambridge vs. Johnny Rosner of New York, ten rounds.

Semi-final—Johnny Donovan of South Boston vs. Jimmy Gray of Chelsea, ten rounds.

Second preliminary—Harry Ah Chung of Salem vs. Sam Bell of Boston, eight rounds.

Curtain-raiser—Battling Thomas of Chicago vs. Panama Joe Gans, eight rounds.

Referee—Dick Fleming.

Starting time—8 p. m.

By J. P. MURPHY.

Paddy Owens, nifty Cambridge bantamweight, will get back into the fistic spotlight tonight, when he tackles Johnny Rosner of New York in the feature ten-round settu at the Douglas A. C., Chelsea. Owens has had a long lay-off and is reported to be in excellent trim.

Rosner is one of the best little fighting machines developed in Gotham of late years. He is a kayo artist of no mean ability and was rated so highly that two years ago some of Broadway's sportsmen believed him a good match for Jimmy Wilde, England's flyweight sensation.

Accordingly, they shipped Johnny to London, but, much to their sorrow, he fell a victim to Wilde's knockout punch in seven rounds.

Rosner has had good luck of late months, stopping some of the best midgets in the East, including Henny Volgar, Joe Tuber, Steve Fleissner and Young Zulu Kid. He likewise had a stiff battle with Barney Snyder of Roxbury.

Johnny Donovan of South Boston meets Jimmy Gray, rugged Chelsea boy, in the ten-round semi-final.

Two eight-round preliminaries usher in the evening's festivities.

Whether or not Frankie (Young) Britt can come back one week after his knockout at the hands of Lew Tendler should be thoroughly demonstrated to the satisfaction of the boxing set when the New Bedford lad collides with Joe Welling of Chicago at the Arena tomorrow night.

Some claim it is poor policy on Britt's part to rush back into the muddle so quickly, particularly against a boy of Welling's calibre, but Frankie is determined to get up there again as fast as he possibly can, and doesn't care whom he meets so long as he gets going afresh. That's exactly his attitude, and we must hand it to him for his gameness, if nothing else.

Lieutenant Jerome Jefferds, U. S. Army, once just plain Jeff Smith of Bayonne, N. J., and George Robinson of Cambridge are underlined to furnish the fireworks at the Commercial A. C. Friday night.

Smith has found little time to fiddle with the outside ring game since entering the service, though luckily for the directors of the West End club he was able to obtain a short furlough for his setto with Robinson.

Smith is boxing instructor at one of the New Jersey cantonments and has proven very successful in this line of endeavor.

HARVARD-YALE JUNIORS BRUSH ON NEW DATE

The best argument offered from the standpoint of members of both junior crews is that by holding the race in connection with the main regatta it will allow all hands to be present on the Housatonic a week later when the varsity crews make ready to settle their differences.

BIG DOINGS ON TAP; DODGERS VS. BRAVES

New York, April 29.—Whoop-la! Over in Flatbush this afternoon the Boston Braves and Dodgers were to get busy in the first game of their four-game series.

Last place in the Tener race is at stake and if George Stallings gets enough out of the receipts to pay the bridge fare back and forth he will be fooling the wiseacres.

To date this campaign it has been a very lean year for both clubs. The Braves have won two of their ten melees; the Dodgers one of their ten. Stallings seemed quite cheerful when seen at his hotel early today.

"True, we are off to a fiendishly bad start, but I know I have got the best club I have had since '14, and, in good time, we will be up in the race," quoth the once-upon-a-time Miracle Man.

Cut in an insert, please. Our Uncle Robbie, over in Brooklyn, has been telling us the same thing all Spring.

But to get back to Stallings. Big George opines that the Braves will mop up with the Dodgers, bag either three or four of the battles, and thus be close to the .500 notch when they return home late in the week to do combat with Jawn McGraw's troupe.

Yesterday the Braves played Clark Griffith's Senators at Providence. 'Twas the same old story, to wit: Washington, 8; Braves, 6.

The show went ten innings, but would have been won in the regulation nine if Bailey had not gone to sleep after smiting one over Shanks' head. The young collegian allowed himself to be cut down at the pan, when he merely had to keep going to own a homer.

Both sides used their regulars, with Crum facing Craft. Massey, Bailey and Conway did the hitting for the Braves and Shotton, Lavan, Judge, Foster and Craft for the Senators.

FRANK KRAMER PROVES HE IS WIZARD OF YORE

Newark, N. J., April 29.—Frank L. Kramer, world's greatest bicycle rider, started on his twenty-first year of competition by defeating Bob Spears, Australian, in two out of three heats in their match at one mile at the Velodrome.

Kramer won the first heat by a foot. He lost the second by a wheel length, but his victory in the third was decisive, defeating Spears by three open yards.

Mathewson Not Going Over Yet

Cincinnati, April 29.—Christie Mathewson, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, announces that he will remain with the club for the present, instead of going to France, as requested by the Y. M. C. A., to serve as baseball coach of Pershing's army. Eventually Mattie may cross to the Western front, but for the time being he will remain with the Reds.

SHORT TRAINING SEASON JOKE—FULLERTON

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Baseball, even in this infancy of the season, has shown that the short Spring training season has failed.

Although the great majority of the major league clubs were favored with better weather than they usually get in March and early April, there is scarcely a team in the country in proper condition, and the first week or two of the season will really be Spring training.

It is rather unfortunate that the Giants and Red Sox got away to such good starts, and that Brooklyn, for instance, started in such a poor shape.

The encouraging feature is the showing of the Athletics and Pirates, two teams that doped as tailenders, and that are going to trouble some of the strong clubs.

Of course, neither team can get very high, but will keep the other teams fighting to beat them, and, after all, that is what the public wants to see.

Pittsburgh's outlook, dimmed by the early injury of Cooper, is brightened by the comeback of Earle Hamilton. If this fellow comes back as strong as he seems to have done, there will be a number of big league owners kicking themselves all around their stands this season.

Hamilton ought to have been one of the greatest of all pitchers, but he fell into bad ways at St. Louis and was sent back to the minors.

Last season he worked well with Columbus, and, in the Winter, Joe Tinker openly proclaimed that he was the best pitcher in the American Association and he begged one after another of the big league clubs to buy him, saying that he knew he would be drafted.

They refused to believe it, but Barney Dreyfuss evidently had faith, and, from the present outlook, he has a great pitcher at small cost and one working to prove his gratitude. (Copyright, 1918, by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

THE FOUR OF HEARTS

Mr. Livingstone Adds to Milton's Wonderment and Gerald's, Too

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XLVIII.

Copyright, 1918, Star Company.

"SIT down, boys," Stephen Livingstone said, genially, as he resumed his chair after the ladies had passed from the dining room. "Have a cigar."

He pushed forward the cigar box and drew a long breath of pleasure.

"This is comfortable," he commented. "I am glad both you chaps are satisfied with the plans we have made. I consider myself fortunate in having such a son-in-law and nephew-in-law in prospect.

"By the way, Stewart," turning to Gerald, "I hope you succeeded in making Cynthia see things my way this afternoon?"

Gerald Stewart hesitated. Milton moved uncomfortably.

"Do I intrude?" he asked. "If so, I will go on and talk with the ladies."

One of the Family

"Not at all, my boy," Livingstone assured him. "You are like one of the family now, and I do not mind your knowing the truth. I called at Stewart's office today and asked him to try to persuade Cynthia to let me pay for her wedding. I have made a concession in allowing her to get her own trousseau—but she insisted upon doing that. She also wished to pay all other expenses. That I forbade. She cannot afford it."

"Poor girl!" The exclamation was Milton's and was fraught with so much feeling that Stewart turned his head to look at him. But his only comment was—"Right you are, Van!"

"Yes. Indeed, it was hard," Stephen Livingstone admitted, "not as hard as it would have been had she not had me to look out for her, and if she had not been so happy as to fall in love with a man who is abundantly able to provide for her. But, when she accepted Stewart she did not know this," he hastened to add.

Neither man spoke. Mr. Livingstone cleared his throat before proceeding.

"You can readily understand that, as she is my dear sister's only child, I want to do all I can for her. Therefore, I insisted on paying for her wedding. She objected so strenuously to this that I asked Stewart to use his influence with her, without telling her that I had suggested his doing so."

Awkward Silence

Again an awkward silence. Mr. Livingstone gave a short laugh. He must do something to relieve the stiffness of the situation. He felt unaccountably ill at ease, as if in the presence of young and critical judges. Yet why should they judge him? They must see that he was behaving handsomely towards his niece. Well, he would take another line of conversation—would less off this incomprehensible constraint.

"You fellows can't imagine what an anxious time my wife had the other day," he said with his most agreeable smile. "She made a funny mistake, though at the time it did not seem funny. I must tell you about it. It is too good a joke to keep from you two who are most nearly concerned."

"It was the afternoon on which you and Cynthia became engaged, Stewart," Mr. Livingstone continued, "that the funny mistake occurred. It seems that Dolly Wise had left Cynthia at Milton's father's house, then, after stopping to make a call somewhere, came on home herself. As she climbed our front steps, she glanced at the library window. It was almost dusk, and the only light in the room came from an open fire. Against the background of flames she saw two figures.

"My poor wife stopped in horror. She recognized Gerald in an instant; moreover, she knew that Milton was still down town, for he had said he would not be here until after dinner. And Gerald was—well—he had his arms about the girl, and her head was on his shoulder! Cynthia was supposedly, out. Dora was at home! Imagine the mother's agony!"

He stopped to laugh. Milton was staring at him vacantly. Gerald was fighting a cigar and seemed to be having trouble in making it draw. Yet he managed to smile in spite of his violent puffs at the refractory weed.

"Well, my distressed wife came rushing up to me—full of consternation. Dora and Gerald! Think of it—and all that kind of stuff. She was quite overcome. I acknowledge that I, myself, was pretty well upset.

"What shall I do?" she wailed, after we had discussed the matter for a full quarter of an hour. 'Go down to the library and face them,' I advised.

"She did as I directed, but when she reached the library door, she called Dora, who should emerge but Cynthia! Dora had been upstairs all the afternoon! You can fancy our relief. I wasn't going to tell you fellows, but it seemed too good a joke to keep quiet. And that was the way that my wife knew that Cynthia was engaged to you, Stewart. It's funny to hear about the mistake now, but it seemed almost like a tragedy."

The Idol

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1918, by International News Service.

LITTLE idol of rain-washed green and gold, little idol of ancient blue and undyingly bright silver, idol of fat checks and inscrutable eyes, flamelike head-dress and pious hands, idol of shoe eyes and flat nose, Cleopatran lips and slimsmiling bird-head over eyebrows, idol of hideous smile—eater of souls—with streaked, painted cheeks and even that stare out of the gloom of ancient forests in the north, dog-headed idol of wax-waist and folded feet—all of you, beautiful and horrible, powerful and half forgotten, there is none among you so potent, so huge in power, as one small, lovely, sweet white one, modeled and living and in a way, set up before ever one of you was carven and there was a beginning of you in the making, heart of a mouse.

The idol of the race of Woman! The silken, speechless, gay, round body of a tiny child—new-come. An idol with big round head, made soft to the touch with a golden mist of fairy hair. She sets him up and worships his perfection—her own small son!

The idol grows and changes—towers above her as the years go. His small arms lengthen and become oaken-strong and brown. It is her idol's hands that clasp her now—hers only caress and wonder. Its face leans above her—blotting out even the sun—dimming every bright thing in the world. Do you think now of any so beautiful, so beyond compare, without reproach—as this one clad now in battle-gold, a glimmer in nickel and leather, faring forth for the old and fair god Liberty!

MAKING PLAY A DELIGHT

Prof. McKeever Points Out What Can Be Done with Little Material

By William A. McKeever

(One of the Nation's Foremost Authorities on Problems of Childhood.)

INVENTORY: Fifty old second-hand bricks, four old pipe cracker boxes, thirteen loose boards, cheap box material, three pieces old carpet, two small chairs, three lengths of bailing wire and broken dishes, bottles, spools and other such bric-a-brac.

The foregoing is a list of the raw materials used by an eight-year-old boy and his six-year-old sister in the construction and furnishing of a "complete home" on a grass back lawn. At odd times during the past week I have watched this childish pair in their happy occupation.

Nearby the violets were blooming, and from the rear I heard the clear notes of a robin; but to me these things of the wild out-of-doors were far less significant than the constructive play of the children. The robin and the violets came out of the bosom of nature relatively finished, but the two young builders were merely in the beginning of working out two interesting human careers.

Pile of Bricks

How much to be preferred above a complete carpenter-built play house is this pile of brick and boards when once we catch the significance of a life in the making. Every time we give a child a ready-made plaything we are likely to rob him of a certain amount of valuable growth through loss of the application of his own inventive genius. We are wrong in expecting a child either to see things perfectly or to do things perfectly.

There was no necessity of these two children constructing their own house in any certain way, although suggestions would not be out of order. The real achievement was for them to build it to their way, and to tear down and build again as often as they pleased. Here was an actual case of a living interest; and a charming growth in skill and practical ideas. As you would expect, the boy did nearly all the work of building the house, while Little Sister arranged the furnishings daintily.

Now the conclusion for parents is this: "Expensive, ready-made playthings are not so good for the ordinary child as crude materials, which gives exercise to the natural ingenuity. Another extreme to avoid, and a distressingly common one, is that of giving the little ones nothing to play with, so that they are prone to run away or fall into evil practices.

I have known a group of boys in a barren alley to put in practically an entire Summer season engaged in the exciting game of fighting. The energy thus turned into savagery might have been used in conducting a dozen things useful and interesting to the members of this youthful gang.

Cheap Boxes.

Why be a lazy, indifferent parent? It is especially a father's job that I am getting on record here. If there is a young American growing up in your home, provide the raw materials, somewhat as listed above, for the construction of a playhouse, and you will thus start him on the building of a life character, ideals, a forceful personality. These things do not merely happen—they grow, and the experience of much patient trial and error is their chief agency of development.

Father, bring home some cheap boxes tomorrow, some old brick or two-by-four blocks the next day, and a cheap hammer and saw the next. Other materials will readily be thought of, while the necessary cost is merely nominal. Little girls as well as little boys can and should use these crude materials of construction. But in outfitting the girl the mother should have the leading part.

The New Peplum Blouses

HOW TO MAKE THEM POPULAR

By Rita Stuyvesant.

BLOUSES that are worn over the skirt promises to be very popular this Spring. They are delightful when worn with a tailored suit and give the smart appearance of a three-piece suit. Many girls do not care to wear a "shirtwaist and skirt," and they welcome these new peplum blouses that are being shown. Some of the charm of these dainty blouses is their sweet simplicity, and for this reason they are not at all difficult to fashion at home. To vary the appearance of the tailored suit several blouses will be found useful.

A stunning peplum blouse was recently made to wear with a gray broadcloth suit. Soft shining crepe de chine in gray was used for the blouse. It was cut somewhat like a smock, reaching a little below the hip line, and was a slip-on model. A sash girdle of lovely Chinese blue silk was drawn around the waist through two loops, and was knotted in the back. Very loose and graceful it was, and the ends were finished with fringe. The blouse shoulder seams, armholes and bottom were hemstitched by machine.

First, the blouse was neatly basted and fitted, then taken off to be hemstitched at a notion shop. The sleeves gave an oriental touch to the blouse, for they were left loose at the wrists, and were also finished with a row of hemstitching. A quaint pleated frill outlined the round neck.

To copy this dainty blouse three yards of crepe de chine, thirty-six inches wide, will be necessary, and a quarter of a yard of blue silk for the girdle. The hemstitching on this simple blouse saves the trouble of finishing seams and also adds greatly to the appearance.

Another unusually smart and becoming peplum blouse was made of navy blue crepe meteor to "go with" a blue serge suit. This blouse had two pleated peplums that hung down over each side at the hips, the front and back showing the skirt. The waist was brightened by a bit of silver embroidery. A transfer pattern is necessary to stamp the embroidery design and contains full directions for use and costs about 10 cents.

A novel feature of the blouse was the collarless neck, which was merely faced and decorated with a few stitches of silver. The long, tight sleeves were finished with tiny covered buttons and the back was also finished with the covered buttons. If the collarless neck is unbecoming a pretty roll collar with bits of embroidery might be used.

There are many advantages to these new peplum blouses. When worn with a suit they make a delightful dress after the coat is removed. They are becoming and economical and are practical necessities of the fashionable wardrobe for Spring.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Why Seek Trouble?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

A stenographer in a very respectable office has given one or two lunches at her office for the employer and two or three of the workers of both sexes. Everyone contributed for the food and other little necessities. These were held on Saturday afternoons after the regular office hours. This young lady wishes, on the suggestion of the employer, to have another luncheon to which some of this business friends of her employer, working in the same building, shall be invited. It is hoped these friends will benefit the business. This time, however, dancing is wanted for which one of the young ladies will bring a small phonograph. Some games will also be played.

Everything pertaining to the former luncheons was innocent, dainty and delightful. All parties concerned respect one another greatly. Do you see any harm in the plan? K. E.

THE idea seems to have been very Jolly and pleasant when it started. Now, I don't see why anyone need read evil into its next development and manifestations. The fact that business friends of the employer are coming instead of merely employees and co-workers may be a bit out of the ordinary. The point is this: The world is run on a snobbish basis and when men of the employer class pay social attention to their bookkeepers and stenographers, Mrs. Grundy lifts her eyebrows. It seems to me, however that any dignified, well-behaved girl can afford to waive her snobbery and to meet her employer and his friends on a basis of equality at least once. If the party is as previous ones, then it justifies itself if it is in any way unpleasant, a sensible, well-behaved girl can manage to call the meeting to order at once and refuse ever to have anything to do with another such party. All of us nowadays are a little too much given to looking for trouble.

Puss in Boots Jr.

By David Cory

WELL, Puss Junior stayed so long in the little toy shop I told you about in the last story that I was afraid I wouldn't be able to write anything about him in time for this one. But at last he came out, and what do you suppose he had in a nice box? You'd never guess, so I might as well tell you right away.

A toy Puss in Boots Junior. Just think of that! And now what do you suppose he was going to do with it? You'll never guess this time, either, so I'm going to tell you without waiting another second. He was going to send it to his dear old father, the famous Puss in Boots, Seneschal to my Lord of Carabas.

Well, Puss Junior looked all around for a messenger boy, but there wasn't any in sight, when, all of a sudden, his old friend, Goosey Goosey Gander, flew down and said:

"What are you looking for, little comrade?" And then Puss told him that he wanted to send a present to his father.

"I'll take it for you," said the good-natured gander, and he picked up the package and flew away, over the mountains and over the sea, until he came to the castle tall where Puss in Boots Senior was Seneschal.

And some day I'll tell you how delighted the old cat was to receive this present from his son, but not just now, for I can't leave little Puss Junior another minute, for the first thing you know he'll be leaving Toy Town and we'll lose him, and then what will we do for a story tomorrow?

"Heigh, ho," said Puss. "What next, I wonder?" and he looked down the street to where a toy regiment of wooden soldiers were marching. And just then an old hand organ began to play:

Oh, where are the songs of yesterday,
The songs we used to sing,
When you and I in the days gone by Danced in the Fairy's Ring.

Over the hills and far away,
I've tramped through life till I am gray,
And now with my organ and monkey close,
I find myself in little Toy Town.

And then the old organ grinder sat down to rest and the little monkey climbed up on his lap.

"Are you very tired?" asked Puss, and he slipped a gold piece into the old man's hand.

"Pretty tired," answered the old man. "All these years I've tramped and played, and now I find myself in a town where they make toys for children. But I see no children. Only playthings which I have no use for," and the old man sighed and patted the monkey, and then he closed his eyes and fell asleep.

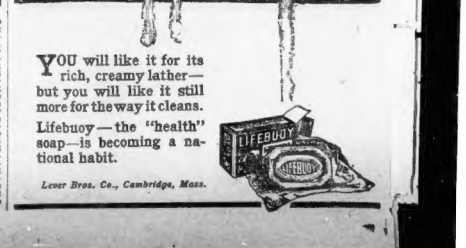
SPECIAL NOTICE.

Are You Ashamed of Your Hands?

It's an old saying that a woman's hands tell her age and social standing better than her face. There is no excuse for any woman to have rough, red, coarse hands, no matter how much housework she may do. A specialist has perfected a preparation that keeps the hands wonderfully soft and youthfully white. It is called La-may "French Creme La-May." You get enough for weeks for only a few cents from any of the big stores. All you do is to apply it after you wash your hands and before you go outdoors. You will be delighted to see the quick improvement in your hands. It is also splendid for the complexion, for rough skin, wrinkles, crows' feet and enlarged pores. Thousands of women say La-may is the most wonderful beauty-cream they ever used. It is guaranteed not to grow hair. There is also a delightful La-may Face Powder that is guaranteed absolutely pure and that stays on better than any other face powder. Save this notice.



YOU will like it for its rich, creamy lather—but you will like it still more for the way it cleans.

Lifebuoy—the "health" soap—is becoming a national habit.

LAND DEAL LED LEGHORN INTO AUTO FIELD

By C. F. DONNOCKER

George M. Leghorn, local Hupmobile distributor, was born in New York City and attended the public schools until he came to Boston to attend the English High School. He went to Boston University Law School and perhaps if the call of the automobile had not been so strong he would have been a second Blackstone. His parents had planned a brilliant law career for him but he preferred the auto game.

He went into the real estate business after getting out of college and sold the land where the present Packard plant stands, and then sold himself to "Allie" Fuller as a salesman for the Cadillac car, thus demonstrating his right to a title as a "star salesman." He stayed about one year when the local Cadillac company was formed and went with the new concern. He was there about four years and then was manager for the Lozier Company of Boston.

He took the Hupmobile after that under the Atlantic Auto Company, which is still the local Hupmobile distributor.

About this time "Dan Cupid" got busy and took him away to New Mexico, where he married. He spent some time on a ranch out West and became an expert "cow puncher," swinging the lariat and riding with the best of the boys. He learned to "throw" on any kind of a "fall," and has retained this ability. He plays "at golf," as he says, but plays tennis and loves to hunt and fish. He has had varied experiences hunting on the plains and in the Western mountains and has "whipped" all the important streams in the Adirondacks and still holds the record for the best long-distance story teller in that region.

THREE POPULAR STARS FILL SYMPHONY HALL

Mme. Galli-Curci sang yesterday afternoon before an audience that crowded Symphony Hall, furnishing a brilliant, memorable finale for the concerts that Louis H. Mudgett gave through the season. Three stars excelled all others in drawing power at these concerts, McCormack, Heifetz and the accomplished soprano who appeared yesterday. There seemed to be no limit to their popularity. All consummate artists, they demonstrated that merit still commands magnificent rewards on the musical stage. The outpouring of music-lovers yesterday and the ovations that followed the singing of "Charmant Oiseau," from "La Perle de Bresil," and the "Shadow Song" from "Dinorah," were tributes quite worthy of the famous exponent of bel canto.

The soprano prodigy's voice seemed tired. Frequently her high notes were flat—the result, no doubt, of an arduous season. However, the rare delicacy and brilliancy of her art delighted the audience from first to last. Her greatest success was made in the florid arias by David and Meyerbeer. Her tone production and her execution were, on the whole, more admirable than her diction. Manuel Berenguer, flutist, and Homer Samuels, pianist, gave her praiseworthy assistance.

SOCIETY FLOCKS TO RED CROSS TEA ROOM SALE

By KATHARINE ALDEN.

The Red Cross Lunch and Tea Room, which has been conducted so successfully for the past five months under the management of Miss Martha Thorndike and Miss Sarah Winslow, closes for the season tomorrow. A special sale of silver articles, donated for the Silver Thimble Fund of the Chapter, will be held today and tomorrow from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m., and tea will be served by society girls.

At two o'clock tomorrow the art posters designed by artists and art students will be sold by auction, the auctioneer being a well-known actor.

Mrs. Samuel W. McCall has accepted the honorary chairmanship of a committee composed of women, who are to assist in a campaign to raise funds for the Children's Ambulance Service of Boston, of which Mrs. John Hays Hammond is the founder. By means of two ambulances used by the service, children crippled from the effects of infantile paralysis are transported to various clinics, where they can be given proper care. Over 750 trips have already been made and the importance of the service has grown accordingly.

Death Rate Lowest

Chicago, April 29.—Pittsburgh has the lowest tuberculosis death rate among ten leading cities of the country, according to figures compiled by the Chicago Health Department. Chicago stands second and Detroit third.

NUXATED IRON

increases strength of stomach, nerves, run-down people in two weeks' time in many instances. Used and highly endorsed by former United States Senators and Members of Congress, well-known physicians and former Public Health Officials. Ask your doctor or druggist about it.

PEEL OFF CALLUSES

Here's Magic! Instant Relief Without Pain

"Hard skin" or callus spots on the sides or the bottom of the feet peel right off without pain or soreness, after you apply a little Freezone, says a Cincinnati authority. This ether drug loosens the dead callus, so it peels off with the fingers.

A quarter ounce of Freezone costs but a few cents at any pharmacy, but is sufficient to remove every corn or callus from one's feet. This is the only way to free the feet from corns and calluses without soreness, danger or infection.

After the corn or callus is lifted away the skin beneath is pink and healthy, and not sore, tender or even irritated.

LIEUTENANT KIEVENAAR OF MALDEN WOUNDED

Lieutenant William J. Kievenaar of company I, 26th Regiment, whose home is at No. 43a Medford street, Malden, has been slightly wounded in action in France, according to a telegram received by him at the War Department. The young officer has been in the service but a short time and in his letters home says that he was enjoying his experience in the hunting from the start. He was home on a last time watching a ball game in Malden between the Malden and Medford high school teams, and was the guest of honor at a dinner given in his honor by his mother, Mrs. Mary Kievenaar, at her home on Pleasant street.

BRIDGEPORT SAILOR IS FOUND DEAD FROM GAS

New York, April 29.—Clarence Hanson, 23 years old, a sailor, who lived in Bridgeport, Conn., was found dead from gas poisoning in the bathroom of a rooming house at No. 120 West 45th street, according to Miss Gladys Rose, with whom she was slightly acquainted. Miss Rose said that Hanson arrived and soon engaged in target practice at the Hippodrome. Later he had a quarrel with his wife over his troubles by going away with another woman. Hanson then went to the apartment while she called on some friends. His mother does not believe he committed suicide.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to look young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels. If there's no need of telling a sallow complexion dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look—a dull, heavy feeling—you will soon be sparkle. Your doctor will tell you nearly all of the ills and miseries come from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with oil, which acts on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that wholesome appearance of health that natural happiness which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

ARMY AND NAVY AMERICAN

DEMOCRACY BOSTON, MONDAY, APRIL 29, 1918 LIBERTY

LAST MEN IN BAY STATE'S QUOTA REACH CAMP

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, April 29.—Massachusetts' last contingent of men to represent their region actively in the national army in the great war arrived at Camp Devens this afternoon, according to Miss Gladys Rose, with whom she was slightly acquainted. Miss Rose said that Hanson arrived and soon engaged in target practice at the Hippodrome. Later he had a quarrel with his wife over his troubles by going away with another woman. Hanson then went to the apartment while she called on some friends. His mother does not believe he committed suicide.

The last men in the Bay State's quota of 16,000 for the first draft are apparently accepting the situation for more philosophically than those in the preceding drafts. All the receiving officers have had less trouble than heretofore.

Major Louis Stewart, adjutant of the 151st Artillery Brigade, commanded by Brigadier-General Peter E. Traub, of Natick, has been honorably retired from the service. Major Stewart, who was a retired soldier, offered his services back into the service at the outbreak of the war and was commissioned to the 151st artillery. He is one of the first of this contingent to aid in the organization of the 151st Artillery Brigade, which is now division inspector for several time.

GIVES UP CAPTAINCY TO GET INTO BATTLE

New York, April 29.—In order to get into active fighting at once in the Army region, Captain E. L. Katzler of this city has given up his commission. Word of this was received here from Sir Horatio S. Krans, director of the Columbia University Paris bureau. Katzler is a Columbia graduate, 1909. He joined a French construction squadron which was training for the first line of trenches. He won the rank of lieutenant.

EDITORIAL

The severe criticisms by officers and men at Camp Devens of shows staged at the Liberty Theatre, merit an investigation by somebody at the head of the amusement system in Washington. The purpose of the Liberty Theatre is a worthy one, but it is falling short of its mark, and a host of officers and men are openly stating their dissatisfaction with the calibre of the productions offered them.

Most of the trouble is in Washington. "Tank Town" companies are sent through the camps to entertain soldiers who have been used to two dollar productions, and several officers at Devens have threatened to bring the matter to a head by demanding an investigation. The soldiers are entitled to good productions, and if they cannot have them they say they would rather not have any.

The soldiers say enough money is being made at the Liberty Theatre to give them something worth while, and if they want to know why they are not getting it.

Whoever is responsible should answer this question before the public, which has been supporting the sunfeeze proposition, gets the impression it has been hoodwinked.

PERSHING GETS STOUTER SHOES FOR SOLDIERS

Atlantic City, N. J., April 29.—The fighting shoes of the army and heavier of sole than those now issued, is to supplant the footgear soldiers have been wearing, it is announced by a committee of the National Tanners' Association and the American Leather Association. General Pershing, it was declared, has been dissatisfied with the wearing qualities of shoes supplied and experimented for several months with the shoe which is to be substituted for the present one and hiking.

17 AYER MEN GO SOUTH TO WIN COMMISSIONS

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, April 29.—Seventeen of the enlisted men at this cantonment who were recommended for commissions by the Quartermaster corps left today for the training camp at Camp Johnston, Jacksonville, Fla., to undergo a finishing course of instruction at the quartermaster officers' training school at that camp before receiving commissions as second lieutenants.

Four men from Boston, including Christopher J. Dunphy, former assistant manager of the Copley-Plaza; Cara S. Eaton of Thompson's Cpa, Charles F. Sibley and Edmond P. Ford of "Boston's Own," were among those selected to go. Private Thomas H. Carroll of the division intelligence, a Worcester attorney, is also on the list.

The following is a list of the fortunate candidates:

Infantry: Ernest P. Bogle, Battery A, 302d Field Artillery, Brookline; Private Thomas C. Carver, headquarters company, 302d Battalion, Depot Brigade, Worcester; Private George H. Cohen, 3d Company, Depot Brigade, Medford, Cpl. Battalion Sergeant-Major Frank E. Crawford, headquarters 6th Battalion, Depot Brigade, Melrose; Sergt. First Class Sergeant Warren Hall, 1st Company, Q. M. C. N. A., Worcester; Sergt. First Class Sergeant Christopher J. Dunphy, Q. M. C. N. A., Boston; Supply Sergeant Harry Eaton, headquarters, 301st Field Artillery, Boston; Sergeant First Class Frank Hamberger, 1st Company, Q. M. C. N. A., Pennsburg, Pa., Lieutenant Ralph M. Heed, Headquarters Company, 302d Field Artillery, New Haven; Sergeant Charles P. Eldridge, Q. M. C. N. A., Boston; Sergeant Joseph I. Sullivan, Q. M. C. N. A., Salem; Sergeant Edmond P. Ward, Company D, 301st Infantry, Boston; Sergeant Albert G. Watts, Q. M. C. N. A., Wadsworth, O., Quartermaster Sergeant Frederick M. Wellbrock, Q. M. C. Remount Depot; Sergeant First Class Ray P. Williams, Q. M. C. N. A., Springfield; Sergeant Henry L. Wood, Headquarters Company, 302d Field Artillery, St. Albans, Vt., and Sergeant First Class Morey Borden, Q. M. C., Supply Depot, South Hadley. One hundred and thirty-eight members of the 33d and 76th Engineers are also transferred into the Depot Brigade today. The majority of these men had been declared unfit for engineer duty and will probably be transferred into infantry regimentes later.

Admiral Sims Calls on Sailors at the Pier to Stock Up on Bonds

By PAUL F. WHELTON.

Aboard the Receiving Ship at Boston, April 29.—"Vice-Admiral Sims, commander-in-chief of the United States naval forces in European waters, has sent a personal message to the entire service has said that we must make the third Liberty Loan an overwhelming success in order that our arms and our hearts may be strong and that the world may be made safe for democracy. Sims has spoken. What is your answer?"

In such words as the Bluejackets of the ships and other stations where United States sailors are quartered on land were told of their share in making the third Liberty Loan the most successful of all and to stimulate the sale of Liberty securities, pertinent appeals and notices are posted throughout the receiving ship.

The Directors of the American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Company have declared the regular quarterly dividend of one and fifty cents (1½c) per share on the preferred capital stock, payable May 1, 1918, to stockholders of record April 29, 1918. S. E. FARWELL, Treasurer.

OUTLINING the necessity for the overwhelming success of the loan and reminding the men that, while they are already doing their best to preserve the ideals of democracy, they can do still more and can benefiting themselves by loaning to Uncle Sam.

The message from Vice-Admiral Sims is proving to be one of the leading factors in the obtaining of subscriptions aboard ship here. The fact that the navy has been the boss of the majority of the men now stationed here and who have, at one time or another since the outbreak of the war, been serving with the destroyer fleet is responsible for the Bluejackets' "The eyes of the world are on the American navy," he says. A record-breaking Liberty Loan subscription by the entire service will route our nation to renewed devotion and to greater sacrifice. For those in the naval service, subscriptions to the third Liberty Loan simplified and made extremely convenient under the plan outlined recently by Secretary Daniels. You can subscribe either on the four-payment or the ten-payment plan.

"When you buy Liberty Bonds you are simply lending money to yourself. Take stock in the greatest financial resources, reckoning your food and necessary clothing, and then decide how much you can invest in Liberty Bonds.

"Fighting men have fighting dollars."

One Real Patriot—the Farmer

His Son Is Fighting and He Is Working for the Country, Feeding the Nation and the Army.

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

Baer, the Congressman from North Dakota, made this picture, brought it in and wrote under it:

"Liberty says to the farmer: 'We are fighting to carry to the world the democracy the farmers have fought for, are fighting for now, and will continue to fight for!' The farmer says, 'We'll stick!'"

Of all patriots, this country owes most to the American farmer.

The son of the farmer has gone to war.

His life, none too long on the average, is made shorter by effort to do work for himself and the son across the ocean.

It is not necessary to have any "daylight saving" plan for the farmer, not necessary to push the clock ahead.

In the season of hard work the sun is the farmer's clock.

It rises and finds him working—producing food for the army and for the nation.

It sets and leaves him working.

The moon, when it comes up, finds the farmer with his lantern busy in the barnyard, putting away the stock—attending to chores that can be done after daylight goes.

Those that study farming from the window of a Pullman car, or during two weeks at a country hotel, exclaim in rapture, "How I wish I were a farmer." They know little about farming or the farmer's life.

The farmer's life is hard and that of his wife is harder.

There is no "easily earned" money for them. They must plough and harrow, and plant and cultivate, and harvest and store, and with few exceptions the reward is barely enough to keep them until the next season of hard work with hours longer than the daylight.

To feel sympathetic is easy. If you want to do something for the farmer, write to your Congressman, say that you think the Government should make it easy for the farmer to borrow money to buy his seed, pay his help and raise his crops—just as other manufacturers borrow money from the Government.

And you can help the farmer also BY EATING POTATOES NOW, at the same time helping your country by eating less of the wheat that the army needs.

Last year the Government, the newspapers and the whole country urged the farmer to plant more potatoes.

He did what he was asked to do. Now the potatoes are stored, millions of barrels, soon they will be rotting and lost—the loss falling upon the farmer.

You can't plough, weed or harrow or kill potato bugs for the farmer, but you can eat potatoes instead of eating something else—DO IT.

Foch Commands the Largest Army in World's History

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

General Ferdinand Foch commands the largest single army ever under command of one man in all the history of the world.

The French under arms number about four millions. The British number about two and a half millions. The Americans, although we know no exact number, and the Portuguese doubtless make another half million. There are therefore at least seven million fighting men under command of the French generalissimo.

Hindenburg has no such number on any one line or in any one army. Napoleon's largest army was about 600,000, and he never had one million men under arms in his empire.

Grant had about 1,050,000 under his command during the last year of the Civil War. Wellington's largest army numbered fewer than 100,000 men. Von Moltke did not have in any one army in the Franco-Prussian War a quarter of the troops now obeying the commands of Hindenburg.

ELIZABETH JORDAN'S ARTICLE

Working Girls Can Annex the Ideals of Others and in a Short Time, by Study and Perseverance, May Practically Make Themselves Over into Jewels of Brilliance and Goodness

By Elizabeth Jordan

Dear Miss Jordan:

Please write about every-day ideals. What should they be and how can we working girls live up to them? CARRIE.

OUR ideals, Carrie, are our standards of perfection. These standards may be high or low. They may be standards of beauty or of excellence. Whatever they are, it is hard to live up to them because we poor humans are so made that perfection is difficult to achieve.

To reach it we must lift ourselves up, mentally and morally. The lifting requires effort. It is easier to relax, to sag, to follow our human impulses and emotions—those impulses and emotions which lead us along the easiest, the pleasantest, but not the highest way.

The first thing to do, Carrie, is to acquire an ideal, or a set of ideals—a good, practical, working set of ideals which you have a fair chance to realize.

We are told that "he aims too low who aims beneath the stars." Personally, I disagree with this theory. It is extremely discouraging to be constantly aiming at the stars and constantly failing to hit any of them.

Forget the Stars

One soon gives up the effort as a hopeless task; and, being human, one is likely to lull one's conscience from that time on with the soothing reminder that one has at least tried.

So let us forget about the stars, in our spiritual target practice. Let us aim our arrows at something we can hope to hit.

Take your own case, Carrie. You're a nice girl, or you wouldn't be thinking about ideals. But you have probably found some faults in yourself. Most of us have.

Suppose you decide to make yourself over—to become the kind of girl you especially admire. There's a working ideal for you! And, take it from me, though it may seem easy, you will find that your work is cut out for you!

First, you consider yourself as you are. You discover, perhaps, that you are quick-tempered, that you are apt to be impatient in your family circle, and that you are—let us say—a little selfish.

You gaze at yourself in horror. These are dreadful faults! But now that you realize that you have them, you are sure that you can conquer them. You see visions of yourself as the beautiful influence of your household—sweet, patient, kind, unselfish.

For a day or two you are all these things. Then you make a sad discovery. No one has noticed it! Not one member of the family knows that you are a beautiful influence. They are all too absorbed, too self-centred. You realize that you must follow your ideal, not to be praised by others, but to satisfy your own aspiration toward better things.

From that moment, Carrie, the following of your ideals becomes hard work. You are constantly watching yourself, constantly forgetting your standard or falling below it, constantly feeling discouraged. Again and again you ask yourself if the effort is worth while.

Let me tell you right now that it is. Never doubt that, in your blackest moments. And, remember this, too. Every victory you win will be easier than the last, because with each victory you have strengthened your will and your character.

If you persevere, within a year you will see in yourself a great difference. Others will see it, too. But don't be content with what you have done. Set up another ideal and follow that.

Perhaps your manners are not as good as those of Mary King in the same office. Mary's manners are charming, simple, natural, quiet—what you would call "refined." You fear, perhaps, that you talk too loudly, laugh too loudly, dress too loudly.

Model yourself upon Mary. You will make rapid progress now. You have learned in the past year how to follow ideals. Quite easily you become like Mary.

Suddenly you decide that you need more education—that you will study and educate yourself.

There's a new ideal and a splendid one. Follow it faithfully. But don't attempt too much at first.

Success to You!

Begin by reading the newspapers—the news and editorials as well as the special features and the stories. These are stirring times. Follow them, understand them, learn why we are at war and what this war means. Read the speeches of our President.

Then begin to read the best magazines and the best books. Don't read fiction exclusively. Fiction is a fine thing in its place, but life today is more interesting than any fiction ever written. Read the special articles. Read the books about the war—especially the books written by those who have fought for us.

Read what great men and great women are doing in the world today and what they have done in the past. Read history and biography and books of travel.

Soon you will love to read. Soon you will be making friends among others who also love to read. Soon you and they will be exchanging opinions about what you have read.

Then, Carrie, you will be embarked on a beautiful adventure. You will learn that good talk is among the great joys of life and that she who understandingly listens to good talk is almost as happy in the experience as she who gives it expression!

Perhaps you will learn to talk well yourself. Not to gayly rattle on about anything and everything that comes into your head, but to talk simply and naturally and entertainingly about the subjects that interest the world today. That's another ideal well worth working toward!

Take them up one at a time, Carrie—and success to you!

The Writing on the Wall

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THE King was on his throne—
The last red throne of all,
Red were the lights that shone
Over that grim festival.
Red as the crimson flood
It flamed—that crimson throne,
Red as the helpless blood
He shed to save his own!

In that same hour and hall
A hand of giant size
Appeared upon the wall
Before the Kaiser's eyes.
The Kaiser saw and shook
And dumbly smote his head.
He took another look
And this is what he read:

"Another Loan goes through!
America responds!
She backs her boys in blue
And calls for further Bonds!"
Each word a dagger keen,
The Kaiser saw it all,
As better Kings have seen
THE WRITING ON THE WALL!

TANGO TEDDY IS KHAKI JOHNNY NOW

By Winifred Black

KHAKI JOHNNY is home on a furlough.

His name isn't "Khaki Johnny" at all; but we've called him that ever since he put on Uncle Sam's uniform.

We used to call him "Tango Teddy," and we called him that because he couldn't do a thing but dance—oh, yes, he could smoke cigarettes and order highballs, and drink them, too.

And none of us liked him very well, except the girls, and they didn't like him; they only liked his dancing, and he was rather good-natured about showing them new steps, and never stepped on their toes, and always bowed very well; but when he wasn't dancing they didn't care much about him.

Except Marie Ysobel—she was crazy about him, and he was crazy about her—as crazy as he could be about anything except a new dance step.

Marie Ysobel dances, too—oh, like a wave in the sunshine, or like a flower in the garden, or like a tree in the wind—and she's pretty, too; but she chews gum and wears her dress too low at the top and too short at the bottom, and her heels are too high and her earrings are too tangly and all her bracelets clink and jingle as she walks, and sometimes her cheeks are just a trifle too rosy and her nose is a bit too white.

But, she's a nice little thing, for all that. You'd know she was nice if you could see how she idolizes Khaki Johnny and always has idolized him since he taught her the "lame duck" and the "ticktoe."

Khaki Johnny's father has been furious with him ever since he left high school, and his mother has been worried to death trying to keep peace, or some decent pretense of it, between Khaki Johnny and his father.

We were all astonished when he enlisted. We said he did it because he didn't want to wait to be drafted—and none of us cried when he went away with the regiment; none of us except his mother and Marie Ysobel.

They both cried and cried—and we all wondered what on earth they were crying about.

Last week Johnny came home and he walked right into the hotel when we were all at the table, and straight through the dining room, and not a single one of us knew him—not even Ysobel, not even his own mother.

His shoulders were broad, he'd lost the dancing stoop, and he didn't pirouette into the room—he marched. And there were lines on his face, lines that meant work and earnestness and determination, and his eyes were bright and clear, and he looked as if he hadn't had a highball in all his life. Why, his very voice was different and everything that he said was different.

WORDS AND DEEDS

By WALT MASON.

Our old Kansas friend, who made verse pay.

I may use language till I make
Demosthenes look like a fake,
I may rear up some nine feet high,
and tell how I would bleed and die,
If I were not so old and gray and crippled up and full of hay.
I may denounce the foreign foe and tell how gladly I would go to wield a shotgun in the scrap and shoo the Kaiser off the map; but if I think more of my wad than of my country and my God, the things I say won't cut much grass;
my words are merely sounding brass. Our Uncle Sam is needing men; he's needing rhino by the ton; he can't conduct a high-class scrap without a lot of dough on tap. To raise the dust he asks all lads to lend him all their surplus scads, to buy his bonds—security the safest ever man will see. And if I do not gambol up, as gay and frisky as a pup, and buy the bonds till I go broke, my loyal spiels are merely smoke. Oh, boys, most any tin-horn skate can work his jawbones and orate; most any kick can chew the rag and say nice things about the flag; but when we come right down to tacks, the patriot who's smooth as wax is he who comes, an ardent soul, for Liberty bonds to blow his roll.

MYSTERIOUS CELESTIAL MOTION PATHS

By Garrett P. Serviss

A NUMBER of correspondents in widely separated parts of the country, who seem to have been simultaneously stirred by one of those quiet waves of thought which, from time to time, roll across the sea of the human mind without anybody knowing just what started them, all ask virtually the same question: "What force keeps the earth moving round the sun?"—to which one, for logical completeness, adds: "And what force keeps the sun with its planets continually traveling through space?"

A Real Joy

I like the totally uncommercial spirit of such questions. I would rather show a man how to calculate the speed of a planet in its orbit than how to make a million dollars, even if I knew a formula for the latter process.

Almost everybody makes the assumption that motion is not an original, but, necessarily, an impressed, state of matter. As a fact, it is probable, if not certain, that motion is a normal condition of all bodies, while rest, or absolute motionlessness, is non-existent. It is true that motion may be impressed, but it does not follow that there is no original motion. Motion is just as "natural" as is matter itself, or as is any property of matter. It is no more wonderful to see a body moving than to see it relatively at rest.

At the same time there are innumerable cases in which the motion that we observe is impressed, or produced, by some evident force. All mechanical motion is of that kind. We can trace the "lame duck" and the "ticktoe."

MYSTERIOUS CELESTIAL MOTION PATHS

By Garrett P. Serviss

A Real Joy

I like the totally uncommercial spirit of such questions. I would rather show a man how to calculate the speed of a planet in its orbit than how to make a million dollars, even if I knew a formula for the latter process.

Almost everybody makes the assumption that motion is not an original, but, necessarily, an impressed, state of matter. As a fact, it is probable, if not certain, that motion is a normal condition of all bodies, while rest, or absolute motionlessness, is non-existent. It is true that motion may be impressed, but it does not follow that there is no original motion. Motion is just as "natural" as is matter itself, or as is any property of matter. It is no more wonderful to see a body moving than to see it relatively at rest.

At the same time there are innumerable cases in which the motion that we observe is impressed, or produced, by some evident force. All mechanical motion is of that kind. We can trace the forces that produce and maintain it, and we get into the habit of thinking that all motion must be accounted for in the same way. But when a body is moving straight through open space, without encountering any resistance, no force whatever operates upon it. A force would be required to stop it, to slow it up, to make it go faster, or to cause it to turn out of its straight path and to follow a curve, or an orbit around a centre. Now, what the sun does is to pull the earth continually out of the straight line in which it would otherwise proceed, and to bend its course into a circle or, more accurately, an ellipse, the focus of which is the centre of the sun itself.

An Explanation

This force, which never ceases to act, is measured by the distance that the pull of the sun deviates the earth from a straight line in a unit of time. If the solar gravitation ceased, the force would cease, and the earth, no longer pulled into a curved path, would simply go on by virtue of its inertia, without any force acting upon it. Its velocity would then be the tangential component of the total velocity with which it had moved around the sun, the radial component having vanished.

We infer from many circumstances that the earth and the other planets became attendants of the sun because they were all created out of an original nebulous mass. There was a common motion of rotation about the centre of the mass, which centre was, or eventually became, the sun. Without some motion in addition to any that the sun could impress by its attraction none of the planets could ever get away, for they would have to fall from an infinite distance under the pull of gravitation in order to acquire a velocity sufficient to send them back to an infinite distance.

Ways of Planets

Any velocity less than that, the "parabolic velocity," must cause them to travel in elliptical orbits. No planet travels in anything but an elliptical orbit, from which we conclude that all the planetary motions with reference to the sun were imparted within the solar system itself. If a planet had dropped straight toward the solar centre it would have hit the sun and have been destroyed, but the chance of such a straight course would be slight, and a deviation from it would mean inevitably an elliptical orbit. Henceforth the only force operating on the planet would be the solar attraction, curving its path and varying its speed as it alternately approached and receded.
